PS-1	A Retail store manager responsible for product placement and merchandising strategies.	Identify the most effective product placement strategy that maximizes sales and improves customer shopping experience.	I struggle to determine which shelf positions and product categories generate the highest sales and revenue.	Sales performance is influenced by product position, pricing, promotions, foot traffic, competitor pricing, and customer demographics, making manual analysis difficult.	Uncertain about merchandising decision and worried about losing potential sales and revenue opportunities.
PS-2	A retail business analyst responsible for analysing store performance and supporting business decisions.	Analysis retail data to identify actionable insights that optimize product placement and increase overall sales.	It is difficult to identify meaningful patterns from large retail datasets using traditional analysis methods.	Multiple interconnected business factors influence sales, requiring visualization and data analytics to support better decision making.	Challenged to provide accurate recommendations that improve profitability and customer satisfaction.
